

BIODEGRADABILITY (UNIT- V)

Biodegradation:

Biodegradation is the degradation of the materials into environmentally acceptable products such as water, carbon dioxide, and biomass by the action of naturally available microorganisms under normal environmental conditions.

Biodegradability:

- Biodegradability is the capacity for biological degradation of organic materials by living organisms.
- It can be measured by Respirometry.

