The Department of Political Science at Mugberia Gangadhar Mahavidyalaya marked Constitution Day by organizing a seminar titled "Seven Decades of Constitution of India," which delved into the historical significance of the making of our constitution. The theme focused on reflecting the hopes and aspirations that the framers of the constitution had for independent India.

The commemorative event was inaugurated by our respected Principal, Dr. Swapan Kumar Mishra, who, as one of the distinguished speakers, emphasized the imperative of upholding Constitutional Values. The Constitution Day serves as a reminder of the principles that form the bedrock of our democratic nation.

Dr. Prasenjit Ghosh, IQAC Coordinator and Associate Professor, Head of the Department of History, provided a historic outlook on our constitution, highlighting its status as the largest written constitution globally. He enlightened the audience on the constitutional values enshrined in our Preamble, emphasizing our identity as a Sovereign, Socialist Republic committed to ensuring Liberty, Equality, and Fraternity.

Following this, Dr. Bidhan Chandra Samanta, Associate Professor, and Head of the Department of Chemistry, spoke on the importance of commemorating Constitution Day and ensuring that the hopes and aspirations of our constitution makers are upheld in their truest spirit.

Dr. Manoranjan Das, Associate Professor, and Head of the Department of Sanskrit, delved into an ancient account of India's rich history and culture, demonstrating how these elements are reflected in the very essence of our Constitution.

Dr. Alok Ranjan Khatua, Assistant Professor in the Department of Philosophy, offered insights into the constitutional values and their significance for the world's largest democracy.

Jyoti Mitra, Assistant Professor of Political Science, provided a detailed account of various articles, explaining their meanings and interpretations, thereby concluding the event that commemorated the making of our Constitution.

The seminar actively encouraged student participation, and two students, Srijita Tripathi and Sonam Pradhan, delivered speeches, adding a youthful perspective to the discussions. Souvik Barua, Assistant Professor of Political Science, extended the Vote of Thanks, providing a concluding note that acknowledged the collective effort in commemorating the Constitution Day. The seminar not only celebrated our constitutional heritage but also facilitated a comprehensive understanding of its principles and values among the participants, fostering a sense of civic responsibility and appreciation for the democratic foundations of our nation.
