1. INTRODUCTION AND SIGNIFICANCE:

I. Introduction:

When we use the term ‘consciousness’ to define the specific psychological states of mind, the simple questions however may be raised, from where consciousness is originated? who is conscious being? What is the object of consciousness? Who is the subject of consciousness? How can it be possible from unconscious external entities? What is nature of consciousness? What is the importance of consciousness? - for satisfactory answers regarding the questions, the three things are related to the above questions, these are the conscious mind (subject of consciousness), objects of consciousness and the process of consciousness. In psychology, there are different levels of mind: conscious, unconscious and sub-conscious. Similarly, there are different levels of consciousness: empirical consciousness, pure consciousness, super-natural consciousness, etc. and in the different levels of consciousness both being and becoming are very closely related to each other. According to modern interpretation of Yogācāra Buddhism, without being becoming is not possible and without becoming being cannot be manifested as pure. Individual being cannot acquire the experience without becoming. In Advita Vedānta, Sankarāchārya has advocated the view of ultimate reality as a pure-consciousness. According to him, there are three stages of consciousness – dreamless sleep consciousness, dream consciousness and walking consciousness. The dreamless deep-sleep consciousness is a pure consciousness, but this view is not accepted by the Ramanuja. (V. N. Misra, Science of Consciousness, Munshiram Manoharlal, New Delhi, 2014, pp.134-36)

However, psychology is not considered as only branch where consciousness is studied; rather consciousness is a very important subject-matter in the field of philosophy of mind, especially in the domain of Indian philosophy. It is considered as the philosophy of consciousness where consciousness is discussed in the different ways. In Upanisad, the word ‘citta’ refers to the consciousness, sometimes it is defined as pure consciousness. It is not the external state of mind, but obviously an internal state of mind which, according to Vivekananda, is self-consciousness of the supra-conscious level where we can realize the essence of knowledge or the reality. Kaṭha Upaniṣad says,

इन्द्रियेभ्यः परा ह्यर्था अर्थेभ्यश्च परं मनः ।
मनसस्तु परा बुद्धिर्बुद्धेरात्मा महान्परः ॥ (1/3/10)

“Indriyebhyaḥ parā hyarthā arthebhyasca param manaḥ; Manasastu parā buddhirbuddherātmā mahānparaḥ.” - (Kaṭha Upaniṣad, I/ iii/ 10).

To explain the verse, Swami Vivekananda said, “The sense-objects are higher than the sense, and the mind is higher than the sense-objects; but the intellect is higher than the mind, and the Great Soul is the higher than the intellect.” (Quoted from The Idealistic Philosophy of Swami Vivekananda, by G. Ranjit Sharma, Atlantic Publishers and Distributors, New Delhi, 1987, p. 159). According to Vivekananda, intuition is not separate from pure self. Pure self and pure consciousness are not different, the pure self in its own nature is ultimately pure consciousness.

As a great Indian contemporary thinker, Tagore follows the philosophy of Vedas and Upaniṣadas as the main sources of Indian spiritual thoughts and he clearly mentions the two things – soul-consciousness and self-consciousness as the two ways of realization. From the general point of view, an ordinary man having his self-consciousness becomes a great man by his soul-consciousness. Here, he tries to say that self-consciousness makes a platform for soul-consciousness by which human being can realize his true nature. In this regard, S. Radhakrishnan said, “Not through intellect, but through the immediate consciousness we have of our own volition, we attain to awareness of reality.” (S. Radhakrishnan, The Idealist View of Life, p. 141.) When Einstein met Tagore for an intellectually riveting conversation regarding the realization of truth (science), beauty and consciousness, he said, “The problem begins whether truth is independent of our consciousness.” Tagore replied, “What we call truth lies in the rational harmony between the subjective and objective aspects of reality, both of which belong to the super-personal man.” According to Tagore, there is a conflict between appearance and reality; in the apprehension of truth, there is an eternal conflict between an individual mind and the universal mind. In Sādhanā, Tagore finally accepted the Upaniṣadic concept of ultimate reality as the purely conscious being which is called paramātmā (the Supreme Soul). The great man (Mahātmā) is a man of consciousness, a man of great soul, and a great personality is a man of humanity. Due to ignorance or the lack of knowledge, one cannot realize his real nature or the reality of his soul. Through the perfection of consciousness (the intuition of our Soul-consciousness), one becomes Buddha.

Mahatma Gandhi admits spiritual consciousness. According to him, ‘God is truth and truth is God, truth is not a material quality, but pure-consciousness’. The supreme law which rules the whole universe is the reality – the truth and the pure-consciousness. Sri Aurobindo – the great Indian spiritual philosopher also accepted the Vedantic concept of Brahman (the ultimate reality as the pure –conscious- blissful entity- saccidananda). According to him, in the realm of cosmic consciousness there is a meeting place of physical matter and mental spirit, where matter becomes real to the spirit and spirit becomes real to the matter. He admits the different transformation of consciousness, for example, transformation of consciousness is constructed from cosmic consciousness to transcendental consciousness. There are different transformations in our life: gross life to divine life, man to super- man, and mind to super-mind. The absolute can be appeared as consciousness-force (tāpas śakti) in his pure existence. According to him, the consciousness-force belongs to the highest hemisphere of the universe; it is an infinite nature of reality. (B. K. Lal, Contemporary Indian Philosophy, Motilal Bananarsidas, Delhi, 1999, pp 163- 64).

According to K. C. Bhattacharya, both science and philosophy deal with the expressions of theoretic-consciousness; it is theoretic because it is communicable judgement which has at least one ground on which it will be acceptable with a believed-content. Theoretic-consciousness is a type of understanding of what is speakable. There are four types or grades of theoretic-consciousness, these are: (i) empirical, (ii) objective, (iii) subjective and (iv) transcendental. Philosophy does not deal with the empirical consciousness, but it deals with the last three types of consciousness. According to S. Radhakrishnan, self-knowledge is possible only through intuition, intuition is the higher stage of intelligence, and self-consciousness is an intuitive awareness.

II. Significance / Objectives:

The proposed Periodical Lectures Series will fulfil the following objectives:.

1. To provide the basic knowledge about the philosophy of consciousness to the participants especially to the students.
2. To help the participants for acquiring the knowledge of the different perspectives of consciousness from the Indian contemporary philosophy.
3. To search the relationship between object of consciousness and the subject of consciousness from the philosophical point of view.
4. To motivate our students towards the process of how to develop consciousness level of mind.
5. To improve the level of knowledge of our students.
6. To increase the interest of students to the detail study of the philosophy of consciousness.

To organize a periodical lecture series, we have submitted a proposal to the ICPR on the topic “Perspectives of Consciousness: Philosophical Contribution of Contemporary Indian Thinkers”. The ICPR has kindly selected our proposal and has sanctioned a grant for organizing the said programme. After receiving the sanction order issued by the ICPR, we have taken initiative to organize this venture, and for this occasion, we have arranged a meeting for formation of organizing committee, and as per suggestion of the committee, we have invited four eminent speakers: Dr. Tapan Kumar De, Professor, Dept. of Philosophy, Vidyasagar University, Dr. Jhadeswar Ghosh, Professor, Dept. of Philosophy, Vidyasagar University, Dr. Sarbani Banerjee, Professor, Dept. of Philosophy, Rabindra Bharati University, Dr. Sabita Samanta, Professor, Dept. of Philosophy, West Bengal State University. The above eminent speakers have delivered their speeches on the topic of the said programme. The first day, 29th Feb. 2024, our principal Sir Dr. Swapan Kumar Misra has inaugurated this programme. Our two senior teachers Dr. Subhas Chandra, HOD & Associate Professor, Dept. of Philosophy and Prof. Abani Kumar Tripathy, HOD & Associate Professor, Dept. of Commerce have jointly participated as chair-persons of the lecture-session. On 29th Feb. 2024 the 1st day, Dr. Tapan Kumar De has delivered a lecture on “Jiddu Krishnamurti on Social Consciousness”, and Dr. Jhadeswar Ghosh has delivered a lecture on “Sri Aurobindo on Spiritual Evolution”. On 1st march, 2024, the second day, Dr. Sabita Samanta has delivered a lecture on “Understanding Consciousness: An Approach from the Perspective of J.N. Mohanty”, and Dr. Sarbani Banerjee has delivered a lecture on “Advaita Vedanta as the Theory of Consciousness: A Contemporary Outlook”.
