About the theme of the program:

During the COVID-19 pandemic and its aftermath, higher education in India faced several challenges. Shifts to online learning highlighted disparities in access to technology and internet connectivity among students, particularly those from rural or marginalized communities. Adapting traditional teaching methods to online platforms posed challenges for both educators and students, including issues with engagement, interaction, and assessment.

Financial strain on institutions due to decreased revenue from tuition fees, reduced government funding, and increased expenditure on technology infrastructure and sanitization protocols further exacerbated the challenges. Additionally, the disruption of academic calendars, delayed examinations, and uncertainty regarding the future of campus re-openings disrupted the academic progress of students and faculty.

The pandemic also brought to light the need for up-skilling and reskilling in the face of rapidly evolving job markets and changing skill requirements. Institutions had to innovate to provide relevant and industry-aligned education while ensuring the health and safety of their stakeholders. Post-pandemic, higher education in India continues to grapple with these challenges while also striving to integrate lessons learned from the crisis to build more resilient and inclusive educational systems.

The invited speakers highlighted the challenges in higher education during and after the pandemic. About 32 faculty members including non-teaching staff were present in this virtual program and they were enriched with the informative lectures by the speakers.
